

Hello everyone, my _____ (named / name) is Gian, and I'm from Brazil. My question right _____ (now / next) is, what is taboo in my _____ (countries / country)?

Oh, I love this question so _____ (much / many). I am very always interested in _____ (knowing / known) little things about different _____ (cultures / cultural) like this. There are so _____ (many / more) I can think of, off top _____ (of / on) my head. Nothing is, like, that big _____ (those / that) people would be extremely _____ (offered / offended) that I think, or you _____ (knew / know), is like super superstitious.

Brazil is a very _____ (big / bag) and diverse country from, you know, cultures from _____ (at / all) over the world, _____ (for / from) Europeans to Africans, _____ (even / event) Japanese in there, so all _____ (those / that) things kind of _____ (mix / max) up in a very big melting pot of _____ (culture / cultural) and taboos. But the first _____ (think / thing) that came to my mind, funny _____ (entire / enough), is it's kind of considered _____ (rode / rude) to arrive either early or _____ (right / write) at the time at a dinner _____ (party / partly), for example.

Often in Brazil _____ (when / where) you say dinner is _____ (at / on) nine and you're going _____ (to / at) a friend's house, it's _____ (customs / customary) to be like, you know, 20 minutes, half an hour _____ (lately / late), it's customary, not too late but _____ (definition / definitely) not too early, for some _____ (reason / reasonable), so that's the _____ (first / fast) and funniest taboo I can _____ (thank / think) of about Brazilian _____ (culture / cultural). I hope to see you guys next time. _____ (Bye-bye / By-by).